

Easily Connects Older Adults to Family and Friends

Residents see and hear their loved ones, share family photos and videos.

It's easy, even for older adults with NO computer experience.

"VitalLink is an amazing resource for older adults who wish to remain socially connected with friends and family - yet are separated by time, distance or personal circumstances."

Dr. Keith Savell - CEO, Geriatric Healthcare Cons.

"Homebound parents can stay connected online using VitalLink, a touch-screen based computer system that allows real-time video chatting using the phone line and webcam. The New Jersey-based company created online software that can be used with touch-screens, no mouse or keyboard required."

"We're excited to be moving into the future by providing a new level of options to seniors that embrace the advancements in technology commonly used in today's digital lifestyle. This will enable Emeritus a competitive advantage in the already large, yet ever expanding senior housing industry."

Barbara Patterson
Director of Nursing,
Masonic Homes of California

"When looking at ways to provide a new network and entertainment resource for residents, finding a solution that enables active lifestyles and better emotional well being was as important as one that supports cognitive development," said Barbara Patterson, Director of Nursing, Masonic Homes of California. "With VitalLink, we've found an ideal solution that can fit the needs of all our residents, while putting Masonic Homes at the forefront of a new generation in senior living where network and entertainment services are as important as the facility itself."

"VitalLink brought new life to my mom and our kid's grandma! We often just sit down and have a five min coffee chat - which would normally require a ten hour flight. Our children are able to maintain their relationship with grandma, and she sees them at least once a week now. All we needed was an old computer and internet connection, and the support guys performed the whole installation remotely, it took no time. What a great gift!"
